Magical cuisine for the "Magic Mountain"

Magical cuisine for the "Magic Mountain".

Davos is a place of legends: The winter sports paradise in the canton of Grisons in Switzerland became famous as a world-class spa resort and was immortalised as such in literature by Thomas Mann in his „The Magic Mountain“. Its location is even more impressive: as the highest town in the Alps, Davos extends along the Landwasser valley. Surrounded by majestic peaks that form breathtaking snowy landscapes in winter. At the same time, Davos is a city with an international flair, whose modern congress centre attracts business experts, politicians and scientists every year to discuss global issues.

A kitchen in Davos unites all this and more: impressive nature, world history, sophisticated atmosphere. The designers of the kitchen manufacturer Stöcklin combines these different atmospheres in a monolithic kitchen block with a corresponding kitchen unit. The combination of RAUVISIO noir with its noble matt finish with the velvety soft surface in elegant black and natural woods is where elegance meets nature. The innovative mix of materials comes together in this kitchen to create a modern alpine style that uses fine craftsmanship to transfer the regional tradition into the present day.
